Tsarnaev supporters at court: 'They were set up'

Courts. As a federal judge on Monday ruled that least 1,000 potential jurors will be screened for the January trial of accused Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, some who are loyal to the suspect and his deceased brother spoke out against the judicial system and touted the pair's innocence. Tsarnaev supporters take message to bomb hearing Southie. Supporters of the accused Boston Marathon bomber convened outside the federal court Monday.

A small but vocal gaggle of Dzhokhar Tsarnaev supporters gathered at the Boston federal courthouse on Monday morning to support the accused Marathon bomber as attorneys briefly met with a judge ahead of his January trial.

Tsarnaev, 21, is charged with killing three people and injuring 264 by detonating two homemade pressure-cooker bombs at the finish line of the 2013 Boston Marathon. His brother and the suspected mas-

Diane Ransom was one of Tsarnaev's supporters who held up informational signs outside the federal courthouse on Monday. / MORGAN ROUSSEAU, METRO

Quoted

"I haven't seen any actual evidence against [the Tsarnaev brothers]. I mean I've seen circumstantial evidence. Nothing that actually links them to [the bombings]." Arina Mondtag, Tsarnaev supporter termind in the plot, Tamerlan Tsarnaev, was killed days later in a shootout with police.

Elena Teyer, the mother-in-law of Tsarnaev acquaintance Ibragim Todashev, was one of six women outside the courthouse speaking out against the justice system.

Todashev, 27, was shot seven times by federal agents in Florida during a May 2013 interrogation. Teyer held a collage of his autopsy photos and spoke of her outrage over his death.

"We are all here for justice," said Teyer. "They came from Boston to kill my son-in-law. I know that for sure."

Investigators said Todashev attacked an agent after implicating himself and Tamerlan in a 2011 Waltham triple murder.

Just as in previous demonstrations, Tsarnaev's supporters on Monday held signs and one wore a T-shirt with an image of the accused terrorist's face.

"I believe the boys have been set up," said Arina Mondtag of Haverhill, adding that the explosions may have been the result of a gas leak or an inside job with "a bunch of crisis actors brought in."

Karin Friedeman of Boston blamed the media for what she says is biased reporting.

"They are like maggots crawling on the dead horse of the U.S. Constitution," she said.

At least 1,000 potential jurors will be screened for Tsarnaev's trial, and 12 will be chosen in November.

Undertaker, said to keep bodies, held on $50K bail

The funeral director who is accused of illegally keeping bodies in storage facilities, bilking seniors out of tens of thousands of dollars and giving families the wrong cremated remains was held on $50,000 bail on Monday.

Joseph V. O'Donnell, a 56-year-old undertaker from Dorchester, pleaded not guilty to all charges he was facing at his arraignment in Suffolk Superior Court.

Authorities allege O'Donnell illegally operated a funeral home, handling more than 200 funerals in the city between 2008 and 2013. Police found 45 cremated remains and a dozen bodies at two storage facilities used by O'Donnell.

He now faces multiple

Visit Metro.us for more details on O'Donnell's 278-count indictment.

charges of larceny, forgery, embezzlement and improperly disposing of human remains, among other charges.

Marilyn Ferrara attended the hearing because one of her friends was among the bodies that O'Donnell is alleged to have mishandled. Her body was found in a Weymouth storage facility and had to be identified by her clothing.

"It's a disgrace what he did," she said. "Every time he said 'not guilty, not guilty' I got mad."

Eileen Collins was even more blunt.

"I would like to kick his ass, but they won't let me," said the 73-year-old outside the courtroom.

Collins was also friends with a now-deceased woman whose body was mishandled, and she says O'Donnell swindled her out of money.

Suffolk County prosecutor Nicholas Walsh described police finding bodies in boxes piled on top of one another at the Weymouth location.

Swindle?

Casino land trio arraigned

A trio of men were arraigned on Monday in connection with an attempted swindle related to a casino land deal in Everett.

Authorities say the three men tried to hide the interest of a convicted felon — Charles Lightbody — in a parcel of land in that city from state gaming regulators and from Wynn

The parcel in question
NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Resorts, which last month won a Boston-area casino license.

The three men — Lightbody, 54, of Revere; Dustin DeNunzio, 37, of Cambridge; and Anthony Gattineri, 56, of Winchester — all held a financial interest in FBT Everett Realty LLC, which held the title to a parcel of land Wynn Resorts has proposed for a casino.

Monday, the trio was arraigned in connection with that alleged swindle. Their next court date is set for Nov. 20.

Authorities say the trio misled various parties by making it seem as if Lightbody's interest in FBT had been transferred to Gattineri in exchange for a $1.7 million promissory note.

The three allegedly hid his role in FBT because it is illegal in the state for felons to have a stake — even an indirect one — in a casino. METRO

State officials say leaf peepers are spending big bucks this fall season. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Leaf peepers invading in record droves

Boston. The Hub could be having the best fall tourism season in 25 years.

Fall is upon us, with its various pumpkin potables, variegated vegetation, gridiron games — and billions of dollars' worth of tourism revenue?

Yes, you read that correctly, billions with a "b."

If recent numbers are any indication, leaf peeping enthusiasts are bolstering the autumn tourism season with beaucoup bucks.

Last year, the Bay State welcomed 2.8 million visitors in September and October alone. Those folks dropped $3.5 billion while in the commonwealth, a figure that could top $4 billion this season if hotel room occupancy rates are any indication, according to the state.

While leaf peeping isn't the sole factor driving tourism, returning college students don't hurt — it is a central part of the New England's draw during this time of year, said Pat Moscaritolo, CEO of Greater Boston Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"It's definitely part of the allure of Boston and New England as a destination," he said.

Moscaritolo said Boston sees about 40 percent of its tourism draw for the year during the three-week span between September and November.

Thus the city's tourism numbers are on pace to surpass last year, when the Sox won the World Series, he said.

In fact, if the current numbers hold, he says Boston is having the best fall tourism season in 25 years.

DANNY McDONALD

New England tree huggers

New Hampshire, for example, expects 8.2 million visitors this year, who will spend about $1.6 billion.

- In September and October alone last year, Maine reported $581 million in restaurant and lodging gross taxable sales, according to tourism officials from that state.

- In Rhode Island, if last year's numbers are any indication, tourists could spend $2.3 billion this fall.
- In Vermont in 2011, visitors dropped $459 million in the fall.

'Czar' to reverse Ebola errors, step up response in US

New role. Some critics have said the naming of a "czar" would add another layer of bureaucracy to a response.

U.S. Ebola response coordinator Ron Klain faces a long to-do list when he begins his new role: soothe Americans' jitters about the virus, fix federal coordination with states and restore a sense of control over the crisis that the White House had lost.

Klain, a former senior aide in two Democratic administrations who is known for his keen political antenna, must also smooth over tensions with lawmakers who are angry about the missteps and mixed messages.

Klain has been dismissed as a political operative by Republicans because he lacks a medical background.

But administration officials and his associates describe him as a problem solver who understands the levers of government and can ensure smoother coordination among an array of agencies such as the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the National Institutes of Health and the Food and Drug Administration.

"(Klain) can have eyes over CDC to make sure they are aggressive," said Neera Tanden, Klain has remained a familiar presence at the White House, making roughly 75 visits there between January 2011, when he stepped down as Biden's top aide, and June 2014, according to visitor logs.

a former White House official who now leads the Center for American Progress.

"They now have SWAT teams going to all locations with Ebola patients, but clearly that is something they should have been doing earlier," she said.

Thad Allen, the former

Coast Guard chief who served in a similar role leading the administration's response to the 2010 Gulf oil spill, said it helps to have one person who can explain how all the pieces are working together during a crisis.

"Many times in these complex responses you have to combine resources across agencies, work across boundaries," Allen said in an interview.

Klain, who has a reputation as a "fixer" for top Democrats, has served as chief of staff to both Vice President Joe Biden and former Vice President Al Gore.

Ebola fear ends for dozens on US watch lists

Weeks of worry about Ebola infection ended on Monday for several dozen people who came off watch lists in the United States, but more than 260 others were still being monitored for symptoms as the U.S. government ramped up its response to the virus.

In Texas, 43 people who had contact with Liberian Thomas

THE FOUR PEOPLE WHO SHARED AN APARTMENT WITH ERIC DUNCAN WERE CLEARED.

Eric Duncan were cleared of twice-daily monitoring after showing no symptoms during a 21-day incubation period.

The Texas health department said 120 people in Texas were still being monitored.

"There's zero risk that any of those people who have been marked off the list have Ebola. They were in contact with a person who had Ebola and the time period for them to get Ebola has lapsed. It is over. They do not have Ebola," Judge Clay Jenkins, the top elected official in Dallas County, said at a news conference. REUTERS

MILLIONAIRE

TIMOTHYSYKES.COM

Timothy Sykes is a millionaire stock trader and entrepreneur.

3 things I learned on a reality show

This past week, my girlfriend and I and six of my top students were on Bravo's "Below Deck." I chartered a 154-foot yacht for three days and treated everyone to what I thought would be a luxurious and fun experience. Here are three lessons from my miscalculation:

Lesson No. 1: Reality shows don't depict reality

I thought it'd be amazing to trade aboard with my students and have some romantic alone time with my girlfriend. Even though both activities went perfectly in real life, the TV show depicts them as disasters.

I made $70,000 on my yacht trade and was sure they'd show some or all of it because it was pretty dramatic. Instead, the producers focused on my complaining about the lack of Internet — which did make the trade a little tricky — and made it seem like I didn't make any money.

Lesson No. 2: There's no such thing as bad press

This isn't my first or last reality show, and no matter how each

New York Giants wide receiver Victor Cruz might be injured for the season, but I love his post-surgery upbeat attitude in his latest Instagram video.

Airlines still don't seem to realize the risks of Ebola, as we keep hearing of more Ebola patients who have flown and risked infecting others.

one turns out, more people discover me, my story and my niche trading strategy. In a noisy world you must do everything possible to get the word out about yourself and your expertise.

Lesson No. 3: Lose some battles to win the war

The biggest reason the TV show ripped on me is because I "only" tipped the "Below Deck" crew $17,000, roughly 25 percent, instead of the full $22,000 I had planned on tipping them had they given me the service I was expecting.

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

I was right in principle, as tips should be based on service. But because this was being filmed, I should've sucked it up and been overly generous to make the crew happy and not want to talk badly about me in their post-trip interviews. It was my bad for being frugal and realistic when I got myself into this situation and should've realized the consequences of my actions.

These served as good lessons for me. Too bad there's no reality show guru who could've mentored me beforehand!

What Sykes is thinking about this week

Stealth augmented reality startup Magic Leap just raised $500 million in an investment round led by Google. Big things are coming for Google Glass!

Despite all the fears, Ebola really isn't spreading as fast as some people thought, thank God!

The U.S. stock markets have had some nice consolidation as of late, which is very healthy for us long-term. A little more fading wouldn't hurt either.

PERHAPS THE ONLY RECENT PIC OF MILEY CYRUS KEEPING HER TONGUE IN HER MOUTH WAS TAKEN WHEN ARIANA GRANDE SHOWED HER AFFECTION AT THE VMAS IN AUGUST. /GETTY IMAGES

Will Cyrus be Grande's new life coach?

It's tough being a Disney Channel alum-turned-international pop star, mostly because there are so few people who really get what you're going through. Case in point: When Ariana Grande found herself feeling overwhelmed by nasty reports that she'd been caught swearing at her fans and that her life coach had up and quit on her, she had nowhere else to turn but Miley Cyrus. "I was upset and I contacted Miley. I said, 'Miley, I'm so sad — what do I do? This isn't true. My heart is broken, I feel so bad,'" Grande tells the Daily Mirror. "She was like, 'Girl, don't even look at it. Just be happy that you're blessed. You have family and friends that love you, you have fans that love you who know what's true and what's not. It will blow over and tomorrow they'll be talking about something else.'" I'm going to go ahead and assume Cyrus delivered this advice while lying spread-eagle on the hood of a car, tongue sticking out, but still: It looks like Grande has already found a new life coach.

There was likely only tongue involved because (gasp!) it was rehearsed. Miley and Ariana, let this be a lesson to you two! /GETTY IMAGES

Let's talk about that infamous VMAs kiss

More than a decade ago, Madonna shocked MTV viewers by locking lips with Britney Spears (and Christina Aguilera) during the 2003 VMAs — which might not seem like news, but Spears' longtime manager, Larry Rudolph, feels like reminiscing. And you may be surprised to learn that the lip-lock was completely planned. Rehearsed, even. "Madonna had been very, very, very rigid about the rehearsals," Rudolph tells Billboard. The nerve, right? "She would never address me by name. She would just say, 'You make sure Britney's here tomorrow at 10 o'clock.'" After it went off successfully, Rudolph found himself in an elevator with Madge herself. "And she said, 'You see, Larry? It was all worth it.'" And she gave him a big (but less photographed) kiss.

Jessica Alba can make an Honest living

Jessica Alba needn't worry about her acting career, and not just because of the tepid response to that "Sin City" sequel a couple of months ago. Alba's eco-friendly lifestyle brand, The Honest Co., is gearing up to go public with a valuation just under $1 billion, according to the Hollywood Reporter. The firm was launched in 2012, employs more than 200 people in its Santa Monica office and is estimated to bring in more than $150 million in revenue this year. Not too shabby.

Sophie Kinsella talks feminism and the return of the 'Shopaholic' series Novel. Just because it's escapism doesn't mean it's fluff.

When British writer Sophie Kinsella released her first book in 2003, "Confessions of a Shopaholic," "chick-lit" was a new genre. The story about romance, shopping sprees and friendship resonated with readers all over the world and even spawned a movie starring Isla Fisher and Hugh Dancy. Kinsella's seventh novel in the series, out today, is her first in four years; it has been 11 years since the first "Shopaholic" book. We talk to her about the book's deeper themes and how writing for women has changed over the past decade.

"Shopaholic to the Stars" is definitely a fun read, but there is a deeper theme of how women's work is valued versus their husbands' work. Is this a discussion you wanted to spark for readers?
I never write any scenes deliberately to provoke discussion, but I do try to reflect reality as I see it. The struggle for any family to balance its breadwinning and parenting needs is definitely a big issue of today. Becky and Luke have a very real dilemma: They want to support each other and follow their individual ambitions but remain a tight family unit. It's a tough ask and I don't think there are any easy answers.

Has writing about Becky changed since the first book came out?

When I started writing the first "Shopaholic" book, debt was not the topical subject it is today — in fact, I feel like I was ahead of the curve! ... The financial crisis shook us all up and it was weirdly satisfying writing Becky's response to it in "Mini Shopaholic." I think the world has been through its own shopaholic journey. We're all a bit wiser now, and Becky is, too.

You were one of the first authors whose books were labeled "chick lit." Was that a label you embraced?

I'm fairly relaxed about the phrase "chick lit," partly because it's so nebulous. What does it even mean, exactly? But I do think it's a shame to categorize a readership as all-female before you even begin. I know I have some male readers, even if they hide the books behind sports magazines! So

I'd prefer "romantic comedy" or the label I saw in a bookshop once: "wit lit."

Has the way you write to women or anything about the book market changed over time?

When I write, I don't really think about "writing to women" or the book market. I think that would distract me, and anyway, I don't believe in trying to second-guess readers or markets. I just tell a story, in the best way I can, trying to write the book that I'd love to read myself. I haven't deliberately changed my style, although I have obviously noticed trends coming and going. (No, I am not planning a "50 Shades of Shopaholic"!)

IT'S BEEN FOUR YEARS SINCE THE LAST BOOK, BUT THE NEW "SHOPAHOLIC" IS OUT TODAY.

Lego and cotton candy costumes

For the Lego costume, use a box that is about the length of your child's torso — it should end right below the waist so kids can still bend their knees. Cut holes big enough for the head and shoulders, legs and each arm. Have your child help either paint the box or use colored duct tape to cover it entirely. Glue Solo cups down to form the pegs and tape down the original box openings.

For the cotton candy costume, spray paint pillow stuffing all over so it turns pink.

Hot-glue it all over a similar-colored shirt and sweatpants — front and back.

Do-it-yourself Halloween costume ideas for kids

Getting creative. See six costumes you can easily make at home — for cheap!

If you're a parent, chances are your child can't contain his or her excitement for Halloween.

Running errands turns into luring your kids away from the "Frozen" and vampire costumes and steering clear of the candy aisle. If your child wants a truly original costume, it takes some DIY skills.

But you don't have to be Martha Stewart for your son or daughter to have a cute, homemade costume. Here are some ideas sent in by creative Metro readers.

We want to see your kids' costumes! Tweet and Instagram them tagging @MetroBoston and you may see your child in the paper.

Chicken Little costume

To DIY this adorable little chick costume, you'll need a few yellow boas. Hot glue them around a sweatshirt and sweatpants and your cutie is ready to rake in the candy! Warm, cute and 100 percent Facebook worthy.

Lobster baby costume

To make an adorable and warm lobster costume, dress your baby in red head-to-toe and place adult-size red mittens on his or her little hands. Top off the look with a red knit cap. Head to a craft store or dollar store for some googly eyes to hot-glue onto the cap. Tote your little lobster in a bucket from a discount home store.

iPod costume

For this one, you'll need a box, paint (one bright color, one gray color), poster board, glue and scissors. Cut holes in the box for your child's head and arms. Paint the box with the colored paint. Make the circular dial with the poster board and use gray paint to make the Apple logo and button dials. Glue the poster board cut-outs to the box.

Controversy. A new way to save water on campus

Two English college students say they've come up with a plan that would save their school nearly 200 million gallons of water a year.

Their proposal? Start peeing in the shower every morning.

The Go with the Flow campaign is the brainchild of Debs Torr and Chris Dobson, two students at the University of East Anglia in Norwich, England. Dobson told the BBC that if everyone on campus took up the challenge, they would conserve several swimming pools' worth of water each year.

But the proposal has some students reaching for the antibacterial soap. The organizers say no one should take the challenge unless there is a consensus. "We would encourage that every person using the same shower consents to the challenge — and if not, they don't take part," says Dobson.

Regardless, perhaps East Anglia students should be extra careful about remembering to wear flip-flops while they wash. LAKSHMI GANDHI

Is it safe?

Torr and Dobson consulted with a professor about potential health risks. "Urine is nontoxic. ... Combined with the shower water flowing down the drain, there is really no risk to health or hygiene," according to their Facebook page.

Nap rooms: The latest college campus trend

Sleep. Students across the country say they need a place to rest.

College is a time filled with new experiences (and lots of schoolwork) leaving little time for students to get a good night's rest. University of Alabama researchers found that a stunning 60 percent of college students aren't getting enough sleep.

Some schools are acknowledging their sleepy students in a novel way: by creating nap rooms on campus. As part of a pilot program, the University of Michigan made room for a so-called "napping station" inside its undergraduate library earlier this year. And Virginia's James Madison University created a "Nap Nook" for students last year. Students visiting the Nap Nook can reserve a bean

Even students at Harvard University have tried to get in on the action. Nearly 200 Harvard students signed a petition last year advocating for a designated nap area.

Horoscope

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22.

You can make positive strides if you are not fearful and are willing to face challenges head-on. Hesitation will cause you to miss opportunities.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.

Organization and attention to detail will enable you to attain a lucrative position. Your ability to make valuable contributions to the workplace will be recognized and rewarded.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21.

You are viewing the world around you unrealistically. Listen to the advice of those who know the score and are not afraid to tell the truth.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20.

Proceed with caution when dealing with money, health or legal matters. Don't get involved in other people's investment strategies. You will be the one held responsible if something goes wrong.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18.

Invest in the projects you believe in. Positive changes can be made if you are honest about your strengths and weaknesses. Finalize deals.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20.

Compromise will be necessary if you are to get a partnership back on track. A quick response to negative issues will soon put things right. Don't hold back; you need to tell it like it is.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20.

If asked to defend a friend, make sure that you have your facts in order so that you can help his or her case without damaging your own status or reputation.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21.

Keep your professional reputation intact. Someone is trying to lead you astray. You must keep your cool if you want to come out ahead.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20.

Do something nice for a friend, a relative, yourself. Favorable solutions that will alleviate your current worries will develop. Expand your horizons by studying a fascinating subject.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22.

Steer away from troubles at home. Taking sides or getting caught in someone else's argument will lead to an intense no-win situation.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22.

Make the most of your helpful nature. You can always be counted on to give a little extra help where and when it is needed. Your compassion will be appreciated.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22.

Better opportunities are available to you, so don't settle for less. Your talents are more valuable than you realize. Give your all, and you will get the results you are after. EUGENIA LAST

There are a billion better ways to spend $1 billion than on a new casino in Boston

In response to Steve Tolman, president of the AFL-CIO, who claims that annually, $1 billion can be better spent at the proposed casino in Boston, here is my list of ways $1 billion can collectively be better spent than at a new casino in Boston:

1. Creating new outdoor interactive spaces in our city (have you seen how great the Lawn on D is?)
2. Buying your family a tastier/healthier dinner
3. Donating to a cause that is meaningful to you
4. Helping your niece with her student loan debt
5. A gym membership
6. Buying a new toilet for your downstairs bathroom (because even that beats flushing 1 billion down the drains of the shiny, pretty toilets at a casino)

STEVEN HARDING, VIA EMAIL

US has many incentives to stop Ebola

Our government and medical officials felt compelled, early on, to allay fear in our general population by touting the superiority and preparedness of our medical facilities and staff, which precluded any possibility of an Ebola outbreak happening here. Even with the early missteps, that original message of safety and survival continues to people in Ebola-infected areas. We have attracted others here with jobs and freedom. We should not be surprised when people from infected areas travel here to escape the likelihood of having themselves and their families ravished by a deadly epidemic. That potential exodus is reason enough for the international community, particularly the highly industrialized western nations, to accelerate its medical assistance.

Early returns on Revis have been mixed

NFL. Darrelle Revis has been good but not great so far in his Patriots career.

Defensive statistics in football should always be taken with a grain of salt.

For instance, the current leader in solo tackles in the NFL is Tampa Bay linebacker Lavonte David with 51. Cleveland's Tashaun Gipson and Buffalo's Leodis McKelvin are the current leaders in interceptions with four apiece. That's not to say those players aren't good, but your casual football fan wouldn't recognize all three of those names and none are exactly locks for Defensive Player of the Year.

Patriots cornerback Darrelle Revis, he with the meager 19 tackles this year and just one interception, has not yet done enough to garner many votes for 2014 DPOY either.

The individual numbers for Revis in 2014 are certainly not there, and there have been several plays this season that have left more than a few Patriots fans scratching their heads and wondering, "Did we get damaged goods with this guy?"

In this past Thursday's "too-close-for-comfort" win over the Jets, Revis was pedestrian against his old team. New York quarterback Geno Smith threw a perfect ball over the outstretched arms of Revis and into the hands of Eric Decker for a 24-yard gain that eventually led to a field goal. The Jets weren't exactly frightened to throw to Revis' side of the field.

"Great throw by Geno

Quoted

"Great throw by Geno Smith. I undercut it and if he had thrown it any other way it was going to be going the other way, because I was on it like a hawk."

Revis, on a 24-yard completion from Jets quarterback Geno Smith to receiver Eric Decker

Cornering the market

Darrelle Revis is being compared to Aqib Talib on a game-by-game basis this season.

- Revis signed with the Patriots just three days after Talib bolted Foxboro for Denver.
- Talib's individual numbers are slightly better than Revis' this season as he has 20 tackles and two interceptions — one of which was returned 22 yards for a touchdown against the Jets. Revis has 19 tackles on the season and one interception.

By the numbers

Statistics have never truly backed up what Darrelle Revis can bring to a football field. During his three All-Pro seasons in New York — 2009, 2010, 2011 — Revis recorded 10 interceptions total.

Smith," Revis said. "I undercut it and if he had thrown it any other way it was going to be going the other way, because I was on it like a hawk. Great throw. I've got to give credit to them executing that play. Great throw. Great catch by Decker ... I was there. Sometimes, it's a game of inches. [Smith] threw it right at the out of bounds line; it was that close."

With Revis as the Pats' proverbial "shutdown corner," however, the Patriots' team pass defense numbers are there. The Pats rank No. 1 in the league in fewest passing yards allowed per game (208.0), a season after finishing 18th in the league (239.0).

And when the Patriots have faced teams with perceived "elite" receivers, Revis has earned the "shutdown" label. According to the Sporting News, the Bengals looked in the direction of A.J. Green six times in the first half of the Patriots' 43-17 win over Cincy, and it resulted in an interception (though offsetting penalties nullified the play), four incompletions and one catch. When Green finally did make a grab, Revis wrestled him to the ground and stripped the ball in the process, giving the Pats possession.

Bills receiver Sammy Watkins, who had 122 yards of receiving and two touchdowns against the Vikings this past Sunday, was similarly held in check by Revis and the Pats defense in Week 6. Watkins was targeted just three times by Kyle Orton and caught just two balls for 27 yards.

NBA preseason power rankings | by James Toscano

No. 1

Clippers (57-25)

Head coach Doc Rivers has a full year under his belt in Southern California, the circus surrounding former owner Donald Sterling is over, and it seems like only injuries can stop this talented bunch. No more excuses for Chris Paul and Co. As far as depth goes, "Big Baby" Davis and Hedo Turkoglu return and Los Angeles went out and signed Jordan Farmar, Spencer Hawes and Chris Douglas-Roberts.

No. 2

Spurs (62-20)

Their "Big 3" is another year older, but age is just another useless stat to this team. When it counts, the defending champs will come to play.

No. 3

Cavaliers (33-49)

First came LeBron James, then came Kevin Love. The Cavs obviously won the offseason and immediately became favorites in the East.

No. 4

Thunder (59-23)

Losing Kevin Durant for the start of the season could be the difference between a top seed and a middle seed come spring.

No. 5

Rockets (54-28)

The Rockets couldn't land any of the big names in free agency and lost Chandler Parsons to Dallas. Trevor Ariza was their "big" signing.

No. 7

Blazers (54-28)

The starting lineup, led by Damian Lillard and LaMarcus Aldridge, will continue to score points — but will they defend?

No. 8

Bulls (48-34)

Pau Gasol joins Joakim Noah in the post. Of course, the health of Derrick Rose will once again be the difference-maker.

No. 10

Mavericks (49-33)

The Mavs snagged Chandler Parsons, Tyson Chandler and Jameer Nelson, among others, while retaining Dirk Nowitzki this past offseason. Impressive.

No. 11

Raptors (48-34)

The guys north of the border look to be competitive again. They re-signed Kyle Lowry, which was by far their most important offseason task.

No. 12

Grizzlies (50-32)

The Grizzlies will remain a tough and gritty bunch after extending Zach Randolph. They also signed Vince Carter over the summer.
